Taking the HTM metro, bus or the train?

Find schedules, fares and a journey planner on the 9292 Transport for Netherlands site: www.9292.nl/en

Consider using an OV-chipkaart. You need to have enough money on the card for your journey. Alternatively, you can load a travel day pass (€ 7.70) onto your chipkaart or buy a paper ticket.

For short stays in The Hague, you can purchase 2hr tickets, one day tickets or three day tickets. You can buy these from the ticket machines lines 1, 6, 12 and 16 (payment with coins, a debit or credit card) and from ticket machines in the RandstadRail tram (lines 2, 3, 4 and 19) with coins only, and in the R-net trams (line 2, 9, 11, 15 and 17) with coins, a debit or credit card. It can also be bought at the bus drivers, where you can pay by debit or credit card.

An anonymous OV-chipkaart for public transport can be purchased at railway station ticket machines and at a few selected stores including Albert Heijn, Bruna and Primera. You can top up your chipkaart at the HTM service points at most bigger stations. For more information on the OV-chipkaart visit the official HTM website.
